Helicopter Beats Plane,
Auto. Train on Short Trip HARTFORD, CONN. — A helicopter proved faster for short range flight than an airplane and far outdistanced two other modes of transportation—the automobile and the train.

In a test arranged by the United Aircraft corporation over an approximate 50-mile course the helicopter flew from Bridgeport to the corporation's headquarters here in 31 minutes. The actual distance was 31 miles for the helicopter.

The plane trip, with automobile pickups at both ends of the journey, covered 54.6 miles in 45 minutes; the automobile did 57 miles in 35 minutes despite a brush with a Bridgeport traffic policeman, who said the driver was speeding, while those who made the journey by train (fastest to and from the stations) took 122 minutes.

Bandit Picks Wrong Man,
Thief Loses Watch
CHICAGO. — A would-be robber picked the wrong taxicab driver to hold up.

Daniel Norton, driver, picked up a passenger who asked to be driven to 45th street and Arden avenue.
There the "fuge" drew a pistol, pointed it at Norton, and asked for his money.

Norton struck out at the gunman.
The surprised bandit jumped out of the cab and fled.

Norton told police his assailant was about 40 and 6 feet tall. He gave police a wrist watch he grabbed as the bandit fled. Police are trying to trace its serial number.

Find Education Can Help Poor

Families Move Upward Under Specialized Training, Investigators Say.

NEW YORK.—When Dr. Harold Clark, professor of education economics at Columbia university, read these statistics it set him to thinking.

Thousands of American mothers could climb their entire families on $10 a year or less.

More than half the children in the United States live in their diets.

More than 1,000,000 dwellings in the United States have built for the industrial and his brother Harold in making a study of eight million in the lowest income areas in the United States. That was in 1933.

The foundation selected schools in three low-income areas: The Appomattox mountains, Florida and Vermont.

The basic plan was to find out if knowledge of local problems in housing, clothing and food could be taught to children in reading lessons and then in practical projects and so win them over that they would take this knowledge home and share it with their parents.

Educators revere textbooks.
Clark in Florida, however, had been learning about the boundaries between North and South Dakota found out these things—each state's possibilities for winter grazing, for growing grass in sandy schoolyards.

They learned how sandy houses should be built to get as much air as possible.

The children learned about canning. One family that had produced 17 quarts of fruit the first year of the experiment canned 928 quarts of fruit.

One school in Vermont had been denied and served school lunches with the food the pupils had raised.

Many Lack Clothing
In Vermont, where many children seemed to be out of school because of a lack of clothing, the pupils learned to sew on buttons, to mend tears, to wash socks for longer wear, to unravel the wool from old garments.

In Kentucky school where this unfamiliar children were found by the experimenters to be reading about plants in Switzerland, they were taught that they had twice the resources of Switzerland for raising cattle.

They bought some, cared for them on daily trips to the pasture, were about these visits in class.

While there are no immediate plans for expanding the project, Dr.
Clark believes it will be quite as effective as is demonstrated to teachers.

The basic point—that given an opportunity, the lowest income people will profit by example, here in medical impression in Europe and elsewhere.

Dr. Clark has been invited across oceans to help other foreign educators open new horizons for their own people.

Determines Individualistic Strains of Flu Viruses The influenza virus, an almost infinitely minute living particle, not only exists in several forms, but these forms are quite different and individualistic, as if they were different species of animals. Dr. Jones E. Salk of the University of Michigan concluded after studies. Determination of differences between strains is essential for effective vaccines.

Since virus particles are too small to be seen differences can be found only in their behavior in certain psychological and chemical tests. It has been recognized for some years that there are two major strains of Influenza A and Influenza B. The main difference between the two indistinguishable so far as overt symptoms are concerned, but their immunological reactions are quite different. A vaccine prepared from A virus is of relatively little value in protecting a person from influenza caused by B virus. The vaccine used by the army is prepared from a mixture of both.

Dr. Salk's experiments show that within these two types there are highly individualistic strains. Since the flu viruses were first isolated from continuous laboratory strains have been maintained at various laboratories. He tested some properties of these strains—especially a blood-agglutinating ability—under a variety of conditions and found marked differences were found.

Most foods and beverages are freed of price ceilings.

Coast to Coast for Dollar Is Promised

Device for Producing Power for Railroad Use.

BUFFALO, N. Y. — A patent has been applied for by the Buffalo Machine company for a device designed to produce an atomic gas eventually expected to power locomotives from coast to coast for a dollar.

Pres. F. A. Alden Miller said the firm had developed a rectifier which produces a combustible gas from a commercial type of atomic gas uranium.

The device, he added, had been "producing gas successfully for six months."

It described the experimental model as about 31 inches high, tapering in shape and built of inch-thick high-density steel to withstand a pressure of 6,000 pounds a square inch.

This device, Miller said, contained a chamber for a six-ounce charge, consisting of 1/160 of a grain of atomic gas "C" dispersed into six ounces of inert material (wood ash).

Saturated with water, the charge produced a gas for which no name has yet been chosen.

As the substance emerges a drop at a time, in the form of a goosey mass, Miller said. "When it reaches the air, it is dried by the 170-190 degree (Fahrenheit) temperature of the gas coming from the rectifier."

"As it dries, the released gas burns just like ordinary illuminating gas," he said.

"It would take only about one pound to operate a locomotive for four days—long enough to travel from coast to coast," he added.

He said availability of the material depended on the government's control plans.

602 Japanese Plants
Listed for Seizure
TOKYO. — Gen. Douglas Mac-Arthur listed 602 Japanese plants for possible removal as reparations payments and instructed the U. S. 8th army to take immediate custody and control of disputed factories.

The plants have been selected to cut down Japan's production potential to limits set by the Allied Far Eastern commission.

Eight industries were represented on the list, including machine tools, iron and steel, chemicals, shipbuilding and nuclear.

Aircraft factories, government aircrafts and scientific laboratories, to unravel the wool from old potential reparations material.
Nations which will receive the plants will be determined later.

Two Parachute to Safety
From Fiercy Jet Plane
BUFFALO, N. Y. — Chalmers
"Slick" Goodlin, 23, Bell Aircraft corporation test pilot and his companion, Charles L. Fay, 29, parachuted to safety shortly before a jet-propelled plane crashed in flames and burst into flames.

Both officers said Goodlin reported he had noticed one wing of the jet-propelled plane about 20 minutes after it had left Niagara Falls airport and notified Fay, a project engineer riding as an observer, to bail out.

Goodlin remained in the plane until the right wing "almost burned off," the company said. Neither man was injured. Goodlin is one of three persons sharing in the $10,000 prize money captured at Cleveland, Ohio, by Alvin (Doc) Johnson, who won the Thompson Air race.

Maids Are Deserting
Jobs as Household Aides WASHINGTON.—Attention, ladies: Only one maid in 73 who has won freedom from household drudgery in the last year.

The women's bureau of the department of labor declares that if the trend continues, one generation per 40 families will be only one maid in 1960.

The bureau reports that with the freer flow of wealth and the boom in the ranks of the nouveau riche, many persons are even agitating for relaxation of immigration laws "on the theory that immigrant women would willingly accept domestic service in order to enjoy life in the United States."

Pup Brings Home $150,
A Bone Is His Reward
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH. — J.
M. Bagley looked up while polishing his car to find Butch, his six-month-old cocker spaniel, playfully mouthing some greenbacks.

The reward received $150 had been brought home by the dog with a wallet of Hermann Neumann.
Bagley returned the wallet, which Neumann didn't know he had lost, and Butch got a bone as a reward.
